AT NIGHT Perhaps you have tried nocturnal color-snapping. If so, you know how spectacular the results can be. What kind of lim to use? Neither artificial light nor daylight type films are balanced for the wide variety of light sources found on a busy city street so the choice isn't really critical. The point is to capture the mood and feeling of the city after dark, not to reproduce precisely the colors seen there. Daylight type films will render the colors a little warmer than artificial light lims. The choice is yours. Try some rainy night shots. The reflections on wet pavement, and in puddles, give endiess possibilities. How about shooting the reflections only?

Unionizing the Banks

Canada's chartered banks in Southern Ontario and Vancouver will be met with stiff resistance by the country's 11 chartered banks. In the past amateur attempts were often have done little about equalizing disthwarted by simply transferring pro union employees. This time around planning appears to be more persistent. The newly formed Canadian Union of Bank Employees has applied on behalf of two Bank of Nova Scotia branches in Simcoe and Port Dover. Ontario. In Vancouver the Service Office and Retail Workers Union has also applied to the federal labor relations board for certification of a Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce branch.

If unions gain a foothold it will mean probable unionization of Canada's 7,116 chartered bank, branches and most of their 130,000 employees. It would also mark the largest and most powerful female dominated union in Canada since so many bank

Renewed attempts to unionize employees are women. In a sense the banks have brought on unionization themselves. Despite attempts to improve salaries in recent years and the smoothing of personnel relations, they crepancies between male and female workers. Sympathy for bank workers is one thing, but what if strikes, lockouts, or slowdowns paralyized the national financial community? What if a breadwinner couldn't make a withdrawal for a long weekend holiday? This exact situation recently happened in the Republic of Ireland where banks are unionized. In an economy that runs on money bank unions would clearly have to be ruled essential services subject to arbitration. If the employees have some just grievances, the people of Canada have rights too. And access to one's earnings certainly would be near the top of the list for business and individuals as well. ### Water for the Peninsula bickering an administrative structure has been set up to deal with the Saanich peninsula's chronic water problems

Unfortunately, credit doesn't go to the municipalities themselves, but to Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis who dissolved a number of peninsula water districts and turned over their assets and liabilities to North Saanich, Central Saanich and Sidney. Ultimate responsibility for peninsula water supplies will now rest with the Capital Regional Board while local municipalities will be responsible for municipal distribution.

The new structure doesn't solve the peninsula's water problems - the commission will have to negotiate prices with the Greater Victoria Water Board — but it does provide a vehicle to solve its endemic problems.

After a decade of intermunicipal Perhaps the greatest advantage of the agricultural water needs. Unlike capital projects, that is, piping and pumping facilities on the peninsula, without recourse to public referendums. In the past, political feuding almost assured the defeat of any such

> But many problems that won't dissolve in water still exist. For example, the Greater Victoria Water Board has never been keen on expanding its membership to include the peninsula. Anticipating the eventuality of servicing peninsula needs, the board years ago extended facilities to the northern now to receive Sooke watershed supcase for making peninsula, those original facilities. That means it is lowest during the summer months when peninsula fields are parched for moisture. Given this situation it is unlikely Sooke water would provide agricultural water for the peninsula, because it would tax the supply.

Still Curtis deserves credit for wrestling with a situation that has stymied two previous administrations, and numerous municipalities.

Manitoba's Soviet Headache

twenty miles north of Winnipeg at the out-let of Lake Winnipeg, a small group of Soviet hydro electric engineers is supervising the installation of this continent's first submerged bulb-type power generators. The installation, and the relations between the Soviets and officials of Manitoba Hydro, are not being completed

These difficulties and disagreements have been among the best-kept secrets in Manitoba's attempt to harness the Nelson River and produce power at a rate of five that of Niagara Falls.

Evidence of the disagreements can be found in the fact that the first power did not come out of Jenpeg, as the power station is named, on July 1, of this year, and will not likely start to flow from the first of the six new generators until early next

On the Manitoba side, the problems have arisen from differences in language, communication, a rather haphazard supply system used by the Russians and the other problems of instituting an entirely new concept of power generation.

For their part, the Russian engineers have some serious reservations about the performance of the equipment they are upplying, and its compatability with the American-made circuit breaker system to which it is to be connected. Also bothering the Russians is their skyrocketing costs due to labor union practices common in Canada but obviously unknown to the Soviets when they bid on the project.

Skyrocketing Costs

The reasons behind Manitoba's choice of Russian equipment, a choice which involved much pioneering in North American power generation, are almost as political as they are based on engineering.

on In the original concept of Nelson River development, no power station was visualized for Jenpeg. The only thing to be built there was a structure to control the

But prior to the 1969 election, when Ed Schreyer's New Democractic government first came to power, the whole Nelson question was boiling over plans to move a small Indian community on Southern Indian Lake to accommodate plans to raise that remote lake high enough to spill additional Churchill River water into the Nelson and enable Hydro to build power stations with 12 generators each, rather than eight.

The 1969 election was fought, in part, on the removal of the Indian village. The new premier, desperate to satisfy both the power requirements of the province and the humanitarian requirements of the village, turned to the former head of the Saskatchewan Power Corporation, David Hydro) for a solution.

Cass-Beggs, in a study which consumed only a few weeks, seized on the low-priority item of Lake Winnipeg regulation While the escalating costs have received much publicity, little has been and decided to move it up, so that the northern lake need not be raised quite so high. As icing on the proposal cake was the suggestion that the control contain a proposal ran into opposition because of the lack of "head" with which to run conventional generating units, but Cass-Beggs replied that power could be nerated by turning to European-type bulb" generators, designed primarily to run in rivers. Bids were called and the Soviet bid of $15.6 million from Energomachexport of Leningrad was so much lower than the French and Swiss bids that it was accepted. Scarcely mentioned was the fact that the Manitoba order was for machines so large that, outside of two experimental models in the USSR, they exceeded the size of any installed anywhere in the world.

Shortly after announcing the project Cass-Beggs told a legislative committee that the total cost would be just slightly in excess of $90 million. This was disputed by a former premier, D. L. Campbell, who had resigned from the hydroelectric board of directors to carry his opposition to the public, and who criticized the waste of hundreds of millions of dollars to serve essentially political aims.

Cass-Beggs accused the former using "schoolboy arithmetic. The latest published estimate of the Jenpeg project is $260 million, but that figure is nearly 10 months old, and Hydro officials will admit privately that it is now closer to the $300 million mark.

said about the difficulty Manitoba Hydro has had in dealing with the Russian suppliers. Hydro discovered, for instance that the Soviets had no method of produc duplicate original drawings, facilities for which have been available in North America for 20 years. They adopted the procedure of receiving the originals from Leningrad, duplicating them here, and returning them, a time-consuming

Because of difficulties in meeting delivery schedules, Manitoba Hydro has been unable to make use of the Manitoba seaport, Churchill, and the supplies have instead been routed through the Panama-Canal to Vancouver, and overland to Jenpeg, rather than being carried by ship to within 200 miles of the site.

Then there is the question of attitudes When a Manitoba Hydro photographer attempted to record some parts of the installation, he was confronted by the Soviets who demanded to know the purpose of the pictures. When he replied that his employer had purchased the equipment and was entitled to photograph it, the Soviets retreated slightly, but still demanded a "full set of prints."

Like Submarines

But the disagreements are not all-one sided. The Soviet engineers are genuinely concerned that the American-built circuit breakers, designed to open in half the time of the Soviet models, may pop too easily, and give the Russian generators a bad name. They are also quite upset at standard (candian love meeting) dard Canadian labor practices, which include fixed quitting times, often leaving a project in the middle of complicated tests These practices are adding to Soviet costs

The culmination of the disagreements But the choice of the Russian nerators has sparked continent-wide interest. The project is being visited by engineers from many power companies, who want to discover whether North America has a chance to harness its rivers in a manner which does not require high dams and huge reservoirs. Whether Manitoba taxpayers will consider the cost of being pioneers justified is another matter. They are now paying three times the original cost of the profor a power plant which is relatively tiny when compared to the major producers of

As one former Manitoba Hydro official put it, after looking at the submarine-like generator housings: "It's too bad we can't stand those things on end and get some real power out of them.

Undeterred by a badly broken arm and the loss of two front teeth, this energetic, enthusiastic friend, breezed into Victoria earlier this week to fill me in on a few political realities.

While he can carry on a simple conversation in French, it made him mad as hell to drive through national parks, reading all those signs in French.

"They're jamming it down our throats," he said profoundly. Ray thinks Alberta and British Columbia should become the 51st and 52nd United States of America. I mumbled something about the political and moral implications of such a step, but he brushed these arguments aside.

It's not that he doesn't like being a Canadian, it's just the economics of the thing. Our trade patterns work best on a natural north-south basis, he says.

I didn't have the heart to mention the nomic consequences of his accident had he signed up for repairs in Washington

He then told me about a national organization of English Canadians actively soliciting funds for Rene Levesque's separatist party. As they see it, Canada would be better off without Quebec, the faster the better so to speak.

After these revelations I just had to ask him about his feelings towards the Trudeau administration. The reply was emphatic and instantaneous: "Socialists They're leading us down the path to out and out socialism.

A mental vision of the PM skin diving off the Aga Khan's yacht flashed through

A few minutes later in our conversation he allowed as how Alberta's Premier Lougheed made a good move in purchasing Pacific Western Airlines.

Sometime in the middle 1980s I hope Ray will invite me over, produce a fie bottle of 1970 Chateau La Tour from his ample cellar, and tell me the country is running as smoothly as the wine. Until then I think I'll take my vin ordinaire with a grain of salt, just to balance it out. — G. R. O.

Medical Services

On Aug. 17 I received my bill for the ening year from the Medical Services Plan of British Côlumbia. Naturally, I did not enjoy the increase of $60 for myself and my wife, but we had known, at least, that this would be the case. I noticed, however, what I believed to be a bookkeeper's error. My payment would be overdue if not paid by Aug. 31, and my coverage would commence Sept. 1. Ever since retirement some years ago, my annual premium had covered us from Oct. 1 of one year through Sept. 30 of the following year.

What was my shock this morning when I phoned their office to be told that there was no mistake! The new law, effective July 1, 1976, cut me out of one full month's coverage, despite the fact that, as indicated on my bill for 1975-76, my annual premium, paid by me in September, 1975, was for 12 months, commencing with October, 1975. This, it seems to me, is nothing short of breach of contract to myself and my wife, and the thousands of others in the same boat, retired and otherwise. If, as I have been assured, the medical services plan can do nothin about this miscarriage of justice, the B.C. legislature can, and should. — James C. Murphy, 749 Claremont Avenue

Public Interest

I am writing to you in my capacity as chairman of the recently formed B.C. Road Safety Co-ordinating Council, a body which comprises members of most of the organizations and groups in British Columbia concerned with traffic accidents, their consequences and their prevention

The council is very concerned that the proposed new mandatory seat belt legisla-tion, should it become law, be as effective as possible to secure the maximum benefit for people in British Columbia. I would like to suggest one aspect of the Ontario experience which you might care to consider and repeat here. In the reporting of fatal and injury accidents in B.C. it is seldom that any mention is made of whether seat belts were available, were or were not worn, and what effect this may have had on the occupants of the vehicles. In Ontario, the press has been reporting on these details in serious traffic accidents, and has helped individuals become more aware of the value of seat belt wearing by providing informa-tion to allow them to judge for themselves.

I feel it would be in the public interest if se facts could be reported regularly along with the other details of traffic accidents, and would suggest your reporters be encouraged to include this information. H. B. Earle, Chairman, B.C. Road Safety nating Council, ICBC, Vancouver

Repression Moves Latin Church Closer to the People

BOGOTA, Colombia — A Catholic printing shop is bombed in San Salvador, and the presumption is that the attack was the work of rightists angered by the 75-year-old archbishop's pastoral letters in favor of the country's downtrodden poor.

In Brazil, Archibishop Helder Camera once the hierarchy's odd man out in his op-position to the repression and economic elitism of the regime — finds himself almost in the mainstream of thought among his » brother bishops.

Here in Colombia, where the Rev. Camilo Torres was killed in an ambush a decade ago after leaving his ministry to join antigovernment guerrillas, there is little disagreement with his goals, only his methods.

Throughout Latin America the traditionally conservative Roman Catholic hierarchy finds itself pushed by events into increasing opposition to rightist, authoritarian govern ent - resulting in heightened repression that drives the church further from a rigid conservatism and closer to the impoverished

This process helps to explain the recent drive toward unity in a church that was deep-

"The church's right and left wings are finding common ground out of necessity," said a Peruvian Jesuit. "When priests are tortured and killed, as has happened in Honduras and Chile, for example, the bishops are

While the church-state split over repression goes a long way toward explaining the church's increasing identification with the two-thirds of Latin America's population who are outside the political, cultural and economic mainstream, there are other factors at work as well.

Perhaps the most important of these is the religious crisis threatening the church's very survival in this continent, where it has long held a near-monopoly of belief.

Statistics show a sharp plunge in vocations, attendance at Mass and use of the sacraments, 'largely reflecting a drop in church support by the middle and upper classes since the end of the Second World War Traditionally, these classes furnished the church with its leadership — bishops, priests and huns — as well as money, land and temporal influence. As the drop in support accelerated in the late 1960s, the church turned

The Latin American hierarchy apparently feels that preserving its schools, ne and radio stations is essential if it is to act as

But with all its limitations, the church is the only institution surviving under military regimes that offers some hope of change, even in the distant future.

At a recent high-level conference in Peru where representatives of the church's right and left wings met to thrash out ideological differences, conservatives, moderates and radicals were not able to come up with a common ideological denominatory — but they didagree on the need to "liberate the impoverished two-thirds of Latin America's population from political and economic domination

'The church is beginning to realize that capitalism can be as materialistic as com-munism," a Brazilian theologican said

'Consciousness-raising' and "liberation" are explosive issues in many Latin American countries, however, because they imply active church participation in the politicization of semi-literate masses in contrast to the church's more traditional role in support of established power structures.

"If it is subversion to protest social injustice," said Bishop Leonidas Pinto of Ecuador, "then any true Christian who loves his fellow man must be subversive.'

The new owner of a car may be very proud of it, but a report in the Moscow Commercial Herald last year disclosed that nearly half the private car owners had to buy spare parts on the black market. And the report in the Sociology Journal says that in the spring 70 per cent of the roads have to be closed to traf-

"I was misquoted." The complaint is made freuently enough to create some mistrust of the press, and new-spapers take it seriously because nothing could be more damaging to their credibility. It is a serious matter for reporters as well; the writer who is given to deliberate or even careless misrepresentation can expect a short and inglorious career.

The complaint comes most often from persons unaccustomed to being interviewed, who speak unguardedly and are dismayed when some injudicious words appear in int. There is an automatic defensive reaction: "I should not have said that; I don't remember saying it; therefore I did not say it.'

* * * When a dispute arises between interviewer and subject about exactly what was said, it is next to impossible for a third party to adjudicate. But careful reporters keep good notes. Three recent cases suggest that the way to avoid embarrassment is to think before

The reporter had 12 pages of notes made during the interview, consisting entirely of angry statements recorded verbatim. When they were read back to the garage operator he confirmed each one of them — except the last and most damaging. "I just wouldn't say that," he repeated. The editors could only conclude that he had blurted it out without con-

he maintained. "I couldn't record," he said. "It was a have. I know this organization too well to ask for that kind of trouble. I told the reporter there is a standing rule against talking to the press, and refer-red him to the director."

There are three families of Barn Swallows on the Gulf Islands that are enjoying an up and down season this sum mer. In true Barn Swallow tradition — one that often finds them nesting in some highly-mobile situations — these three families have chosen to set up housekeeping in the steel frame work that graces the undersides of ferry ramps.

I'm not sure if the birds have memorized the ferry schedules or if they've just gotten used to the periodic intrusions of these leviathans into their daily routine. Whatever the reason, the arrival of the ferry and the resultant clanking upheaval of their nest sites seems to be accepted by the Barn swallows and taken with notable aplomb

While this kind of thing is nothing new for adult Barn Swallows, it leave syou wondering just what effect it will have on the young birds being born into an unstable world of periodic and often violent disturbances with the imminent areat of disaster so continuous a part of their formative

* * * The Barn Swallows of the Gulf Islands brought to mind a similar incident in Manitoba — also involving a ferry — where while the vertical movement of the nest was at a minimum, the lateral movement was extensive.

This story involves the Hecla Island ferry, that on-again, off-again, connection that Manitobans of Icelandic ancestry tolerated between mainland Manitoba and that Icelandic redoubt, Hecla Island in Lake Winnipeg. As I recall, the Hecla Island ferry steered a mile-long course to and from the Island about once every hour - when the wind was right

While the erratic nature of the ferry's runs was often the butt of local humor, it was no obstacle to the Barn Swallows that nested on the ferry every year — sometimes twice — and happily accompanied the boat, either on the nest, or on a running-wire, or in the air alongside, throughout the

But, as I say, this kind of thing isn't too unusual for Barn Swallows. Even Tree Swallows, Robins and Phoebes have been known to get themselves involved in similar situations without ill effects.

The Barn Swallows Ride With the Tide

But I know of one Robin that may have overstretched her luck a bit. She chose the brake-step of a grain car on a siding near Winnipeg to set up house. Her plight came to light when newspapers in Regina carried photos of her on the nest and stories to the effect that the car had just arrived in nest and stories to the effect that the car had just arrived in the Queen City after having travelled the 500-odd miles from Winnipeg in the previous 24 hours.

I wonder what dad thought when he arrived home the previous day to find mother, nest, eggs, and home, gone!

This story took place in the days when grain cars were unloaded by hand without the modern machinery that picks the car up and tips it from end to end until empty. In those the car up and tips it from end to end until empty. In those days, if that mother robin made it all the way to Vancouver 'riding the rods'', she still had a chance to survive even the unloading; not so today.

North America doesn't have a monopoly on the travelling-bird-nest stories. Take this one about the little bird, after which our North American Robin was named, the

A family of these pugnacious little chaps set up shop in a wagon, which, shortly after the young hatched, began a 200-mile journey. One parent accompanied the wagon the entire distance, feeding the young en route. The other? Well, his comments remain unrecorded.

Probably the best example of adaptation involving a mobile nest comes from Westphalia in Germany where a pair of White Wagtails synchronized their parental duties with the comings-and-goings of a tank truck operating out of a local garage.

After building their nest on the tank truck; the two parents were obliged to maintain their household despite its frequent long trips to and from the garage. When the truck left, one bird went with it; when it returned the pair changed off, with the travelling bird being relieved by the one that stayed home.

Four young were successfully raised. Which leaves me wondering if we've suddenly got a race of wagtails on our hands that are imprinted to tank trucks as nest sites. If so, it

As a result, this year more than 100,000 Californians will be jetting overseas to dozens of exotic destinations: Seville, Tangier, Zurich, Vienna, Monte Carlo, Grenoble, Pra-gue, St. Moritz, Oslo, Amsterdam, Tokyo, Bangkok, Sin-gapore, New Delhi, Bali, Hong Kong, Machu Picchu, Rio, Buenos Aires, Puerto Vallarta, Acapulco.

The list goes on. Alford's venture into the charter travel field began in 1958 when he founded Unitours, the parent company of Club Universe. Born in Germany and educated in England, Alford bankrolled his operation with $1,000.

After this he went after groups — employees of the Department of Water and Power, Douglas Aircraft and others.
With an armful of brochures and films to whet the appe-tite, he appeared before groups during their lunch hours and evenings, pitching his product — the cheapie tour to romantic places. At a time when the going rate for independent travel to Europe was $2,000, Alford was booking 30-day tours for only $800.

Soon convoys of Califor-nians filled the heavens be-tween the United States and their overseas destinations. He operated Lockheed Con-

Rhine's friendly vintners

By JOHN PINKERMAN

RUDESHEIM (CNS) Almost every city in West Germany claims its inhabi-fants to be "a different kind of German." The general idea seems to be that "different" means better, friendlier, more hospitable. hospitable.

The people of this fascinating city of 8,000, right on the famous Rhine River and all the beauty both sides of the busy stream, might be the ones who are really "different."

Most of them are involved in the wine business, either rending the 700 acres of vines that literally climb the steep slopes up to 3,000 feet or makng the wine or selling it drinking it in the dozens of ex-citing wine houses that dot alleys leading off the main is one of the most famous wine towns in the world, with special attention given for its outstanding German brandy. They also boast, in proof of their town's fame, that 2.5 million visitors eat, drink and be merry here every year. They arrive from most European countries by car and from all over the world by train and Rhine River

The Romans started the wine business in the early 13th century and there are buildings and ruins from that era still to be seen. One is the Ehrenfels castle.

Rhine tourists stop over in Rudesheim

One of the most, exciting places or areas to visit here is the Drosselgasse, a narrow uphill alley leading off the main riverside street. It is packed on both sides by wine houses, sausage stands and occasional curio shops. It is confusion personified during the daylight hours and utter bedlam after dark.

Mobs throng place after place and this is the time the good people of Rudeshein display their unabated good na-ture. They welcome strangers like brothers and don't be too concerned if ample quantities of wine are responsible for their gregarious nature. They laugh at authority, even their own German authority and they live their days in the same manner as tourists do eat, drink and be merry.

There are a few things here beyond the wine, however, and one is the spectacular view you get from the aerial cable-way that goes from the Seilbahn (rope station) to the Niederwald, location at 3,500 feet of the famous Germania Monument, a 32-foot statue ket atop an elaborate base that commands a view of the that commands a view of the River Valley for many miles. The monument was completed in 1883 to mark the unification of the German emvisitor may want to visit an interesting establishment called the Musik-salon. It is located in a house built in 1420 and features exhibits of all kinds and sizes of self-playing mechanical musical instruments. The unique exhibits are presided over by a bearded impressario named Siegfried Wendel. He is attired in black hat, beard and formal frock attire - except his bare chest shows through where a shirt should be. But, he is as hospitable as the wine

But, it may be near dinner time now, and that might intime now, and that might include a session in wine tasting if you are lucky. The excellent dinner might be at the Hotel Atmueller and your "teacher" in wine tasting might be Edmund R. Madel. He will offer you five kinds to compare and provide the bread to dull the taste of one before you try another.

Sport as Old as Caesar

Twice a week throughout the summer a small group of men participate at Glanford Park in Saanich in a sport as old as Caesar.

Squaring off into teams, they compete in tossing 2½-pound U-shape pieces of iron at metal spikes driven into the ground 40 feet apart. The object is to ring the iron around the stake.
It's horseshoes and it's a

In the old days the iron was a shoe from a horse. Today it may look like a horseshoe but it isn't. It's a specialty manufactured sporting shoe, broader, squarer and about three times dearer than the standard equine footwear. In Victoria a pair costs $12.60.

The sport has never been big in Victoria although the Greater Victoria Horseshoe ganized horseshoe club on meson, 64, says a drive is on Vancouver Island, it was formed 40 years ago, the result of unremitting efforts by the likes of Frank Boon, Colin citizens, he's hoping to attract nine and the likes of the likes of Frank Boon, Colin citizens, he's hoping to attract nine and the likes of the li Butts, Roy Jago and Frank

Chateau-Margaux's plight underscores a deepening widespread financial crisis facing many of the 300 owners and vintners in the Bordeaux for twice the amount offered by prospective French region, who were harmed by the 1972 fraud scandals and get rich when the franctic speculative boom in Bordeaux wines began in 1970. They OLYMPIC WATERFRONT wound up strapped for cash when the boom broke two years ago.

The decision to reject the American offer means that Chateau-Margaux will have to have government help if it is to pay off debts that are cost-ing the firm $4,000 a day in inthe first $4,000 a day in in-terest, owner Pierre Ginestet said. "We are waiting for their proposals. Perhaps it could be low-interest government loans.'

Chateau-Margaux is the most celebrated "cru" of about 60 types of wine sold by the Ginestet family. Only wine that is produced on a designated 110-acre tract, which has been owned by the Ginestets for four genera-tions, can be labelled as their Premier Grand Cru.

Its heady aroma has been savored by kings, presidents and, according to the story told by actress-model Margaux Hemingway to explain her first name, by her parents the night she was conceived.

The finance ministry, which The finance ministry, which has to approve the sale of more than 20 per cent of a French company to foreigners, indicated that "national prestige" and the government's desire to keep tight controls over the wine industry, one of Frnace's principal export earners, led to the refusal of a bid from Nathe refusal of a bid from National Distillers.

Chateau-Haut-Brion, another prestigious Bordeaux vineyard, was sold to the Dillon Banking family of the United States in 1936, and Chateau-Latour went to British owners in 1963.

in Greater Victoria effective Sept. 3

Effective Friday September 3, there will be important changes to the transit system to provide improved service for a large number of passengers in the Greater Victoria area. The routes affected are 5 South Fairfield, 6 Lake Hill, 7 Outer Wharf, 8 Gorge, 9 Beacon Hill, 10 Haultain, 23 Esquimalt, 19 Carey, 919 Carey and 930 Douglas. Departure times for 3 Gonzales and 4 Mt. Tolmie have been changed.

of the use of the many routes, including counts of passengers at selected times and points.

Particular study has been given to loss of time because of lay-overs of buses in the downtown area. Steps are being taken to reduce this lost time, the first of which is the joining of some routes. 5 South Fairfield has been linked with 9 Beacon Hill. 8 Gorge and 10 Haultain also have been linked. In addition to reduction of time lost because of city-centre layovers, larger buses can be used on some routes to alleviate crowding.

South Fairfield-Beacon Hill will have an improved frequency of service — every 15 minutes throughout the day and 30-minutes after 6 p.m. and on Sundays and holidays.

6 Lake Hill and Haultain-Gorge also will have a 15-minute frequency during the day, with continuation of the present 40-minute service after 6 p.m. and be made at Brydon Exchange. on Sundays and holidays.

> 930 Douglas buses will operate at 15-minute frequency throughout the day to 6 p.m., Monday to Saturday, with a bus every 30 minutes after 6 p.m. and on Sundays and holidays.

With this change of routing to serve the western section of the James Bay area, the 7 Outer Wharf service will be discontinued. FDA Commissioner Alexander Schmidt, acting on the advice given by a panel of medical consultants in April, made the recommendation to the U.S. Justice Department's Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) last week.

Control of Darvon and other drugs containing propoxyphene is "clearly warranted," Schmidt told Dr. Theodore Cooper, assistant secretary of health, education and welfare. Cooper agreed in an Aug. 12 letter to DEA administrator Peter Bensinger.

Aug. 12 letter to DEA administrator Peter Bensinger.

The DEA had urged the FDA in June, 1973, to put propoxyphene in Schedule 4 under the Controlled Subatances Act, meaning that a prescription could be refilled no more than five times in six months and that suppliers and druggists would be required to control inventories to deter to control inventories to deter possible abuses.

The FDA turned down the request, but reconsidered this year after a study commissioned by Eli Lilly and Co., maker of Darvon, implicated propoxyphene in thousands of overdose deaths over a period of years. of years.

The study, done by the Uni-The study, done by the University of Utah's Centre for Human Toxicology, involved analysis of propoxyphenerelated deaths — as shown by records of coroners, medical examiners and forensic laboratories — in areas with a combined population of 52.6 million.

Although Chicago and New York, where narcotics prob-lems are severe, were excluded, researchers found that in the studied jurisdictions, deaths involving propoxwhene overdoses — mainly middle-class white city dwellers in the 20-to-50 age range — increased from 152 in 1972 to 269 in 1974.

After Lilly got the study results, it tightened the official labeling for Darvon, which it first marketed in 1957.

Federal prosecutors said the action against Allied Chemical Corp. was the largest environmental case filed to date. A company spokesman said the plea could leave the firm liable for as much as $13 million in fines.

In a surprise move at an unscheduled U.S. district court hearing, counsel for Allied Chemical entered the nocontest plea to 940 counts of dumping pesticide manufac-turing wastes into the James River from a Hopewell, Va., chemical plant which made Kepone.

A no-contest plea differs from a guilty plea in that a defendant admits no guilt. The Allied Chemical spokesman said the firm's decision was not the result of plea bargaining.

Stunning European Imports

When it comes to clothes ... there's precious little that's really exclusive nowadays ... at any price ... But definitely nowhere else in Victoria will you find a duplicate of the very beautiful Indian print chiffon dinner dress by Vali, of Paris, which we admired at Gibson's this week! ... A brilliant orange and pink print on a black background ... it's a two-piece style with very fitted bodice and full sleeves, and has its own chiffon square scarf ... One only, in a size 10 ... and a similar style in a brilliant blue print on black is a 12 ... Similarly exclusive is an exciting French perfume by this same designer, Vali ... Bottles in quarter, half, and one ounce sizes nestle in the heart of a crystal-clear lucite cube which can later be used to enclose perhaps a flower ... for a very decorative ornament ... A mere whiff of this new Vali fragrance will waft you into heaven! ... Back to fashions ... we saw another dinner dress in a very fine wool print by Mr. John Couturier of Italy ... A beige-grey mottled print cut on Empire lines with soft skirt ... If you wear a size 14 or 16, you'll find this very elegant and sylph-making! ... A new restaurant dress in a cream and camel blurred print is simplicity itself ... Soft midi skirt fitted over the hips, envelope neck and slim sleeves ... Look closely and you'll discover a lovely sleek tiger on the skirt front ... enough in itself to provide a fascinating topic of conversation! ... Same delightful style in a brilliant blue with grey and brown, at ... Gibson's, 708 View St., 384-5913. Stunning European Imports .

"Doeskin" jacket goes with everything ...

We'd have sworn it was the finest of doeskin ... that Paul Rogers tucked shirt jacket they showed us at Impacts 'n' Imports last Monday ... and accustomed as we are to seeing things which are other than they seem ... we found it hard to believe this luxurious stuff is really a man-made fabric! ... We love the way it's cut ... and its lively chocolate brown shade has a chameleon-like property in that it seems to blend with everything regardless of color! ... For instance, there are Kinlock Anderson pure wool skirts from Scotland which might have been made especially for this jacket ... to form a smart, casual suit . One style in a brown check tweed with a touch of rust ... cut straight with inverted front pleat ... the other a flared skirt in brown and rust check ... and believe it or not, this same skirt in gold and black looks equally at home with the brown jacket! ... These really smart skirts are priced from $45 to $75 ... As for the jacket ... fully lined, and washable ... it's tagged at $100 ... and we've a hunch could well prove to be the best $100 you've ever spent! ... We hear that some new pants and skirts are due in any day now ... made from a new material called "Chamere" ... a cashmere-textured blend which ... who knows? ... might fool us into thinking they're cashmere! ... Pants will sell for $55 ... Skirts, $50 ... These sound great for wearing with blouses and sweaters ... Impacts 'n' Imports, 8 Centennial Square, 388-7023.

Smart fashions to head into fall .

How they manage it we'll never really know ... but every successive season in all the years we've been writing this column ... Miss Frith's have always seemed to come up the 'firstest with the mostest!'' ... Like now ... Fall fashions are arriving so thick and fast it'll take your breath away ... and when we went browsing around this week we saw such a variety of absolutely smashing fashions that we really couldn't settle on any one thing to feature! ... While dresses and skirts are strong ... pant suits are still very much to the fore ... We especially like those by Kendall ... a new supplier to Miss Frith's this year ... They're pure wool knits in three and four-piece styles ... And what's more, the styling is really good ... simple and well-cut, but interesting in treatment ... like the skirt-pant-jacket-vest suit ... especially smart in black, with black and white striped vest ... Malber International makes some smart suits too ... One with a brown and bone knit turtleneck pullover with a tweedy look, has a wrap sweater ... It's nice to see so many doubleknit suits to choose from! ... If you're a very tailored type you may like the smart suit in men's suiting material ... Lots of knit dresses with exting touches ... A number of "fun" fur coats which really don't try to fool you (though there's a 'mink' which comes close to it!) ... but are fun to wear on occasion' ... and are certainly cozy to snuggle into! ... # Hooking Up the Errors

By MAY E. MacLEAN

Continuing with my ideas and tips for knitting lace, one of the wise things to do is always have a crochet hook handy, for picking up any stitches you may drop.

In the case of a more serious accident serious accident — for instance, if for some reason a number of stitches slip off the needles — then if is best to put down the work, and spray starch on the area where the stitches have run.

Place the knitting on a clean towel, wait for the starch to dry thoroughly and them pick up the stitches with the crochet hook according to the pattern.

You'll find that the light starching prevents the stitches from running further into the open fabric of the lacey stitches. lacey stitches. Small corks over the points of the needles prevent any mishaps occuring while the knitting is in the bag, and this is very often the time when the stitches tend to slip off the needles.

If it is necessary to join on new balls of thread, use the ends of three to four inches hanging until the article is finished. Then darn in the ends of the yarn carefully on the wrong side, each seperately so that they will not show, and cut them off after the and cut them off after the lace has been washed, stretched and ironed.

When working designs on two needles, of course, the easiest and simplest way is to join the ends by a reef knot again at the beginning of a row. Again, do not cut off the ends until the article has been washed, stretched and invaned washed, stretched and ironed. When darning-in these ends,

Two months ago, Attorney General Louis Lefkowitz began investigating the black market in wiffch young women not wanting to keep their babies but not wanting an abortion, were referred through abortion clinics to a number of New York City area lawyers.

The lawyers arranged and paid for the women's trans-portation to New York and the birth of their children and then arranged adoptions for a price.

The going fee for a white baby was $8,000 to $16,000. Toia said.

Toia said he spoke to at least two dozen people from across the country, including women who gave up babies and adoptive parents and sight when he said that in one of his books.

There is something spiritually suffocating about the well-manicured niceness that is so highly valued in the church today, that curious tendency to make faith primarily a matter of respect-ability with a thin coating of spiritual varnish.

Sômeone has written of a group of Christians who give the appearance of having been starched before being washed. There is, of course, another side to church life today, that of far-ranging concern for the needs and suffer cern for the needs and sufferings of persons everywhere, a commitment for compassionate service of the hurts of the world. But no one who has inside knowledge of the churches today will deny that they often try to hide from the demands of their faith in their respectability.

Respectability, of course, should not be dismissed with a few petulant sneers. And I would not suggest that disreputableness be cultivated as an aid to saintliness and commit-ment. But it must be said that excessive concern for respec-tability does hobble the Christian cause in the world today. The lessons of Jesus' ministry and teaching do not afford much comfort and assurance to us ultra-respectasurance to us ultra-respecta-ble modern Christians.

John Oman, an influential theologian of the earlier years of this century, made this point: "The sole evil our Lord point: "The sole evil our Lord turned aside to denounce was just this leaven of respect-ability. The reason for this ex-ception was that, while other evils the new order would amend, by this evil the new

California seems much closer than 4,600 miles away. The Marshall Islanders live on Ebye — 73 parched across where 7,000 people have crowded out all but a few trees and patches of grass. There is only one doctor to treat common ailments such as influenza, scabies, dysen-tery and malnutrition.

"There is no question that there is discrimination," says George Allen, an American lawyer employed by Microne-sian Legal Services. "It is just like South Africa's apartheid."

But American officials say Kwajalein is no different from any other U.S. military base. Kwajalein Atoll, a necklace of more than 90 small islands surrounding 1,000 square miles of lagoon, has been a missile test base since 1959. The Nike-Zeus, Nike-X, Sentinel and Safeguard ABM systems were tested here, and Kwajalein Lagoon is the tar-get for ICBMs test-fired from Vandenberg Air Force Base in California.

Security is strict. Visitors must get permission from the Army, and reporters have been allowed on the island-only in the last few years.

Although the Safeguard system was scrapped, Kwajalein is now preparing to test radar and, computers for another missile defence system.

"As long as there is ballis-tic missile defence testing and intercontinental ballistic missile testing, there will be a need for Kwajalein Missile Range." says Col. Robert L. Russell, the base commander.

Rüssell estimates the U.S. investment here at $1 billion.

For the Marshallese, though, "Over the long term, Kwajalein is a real liability," says Sen. Amata Kabua of the Congress of Microneasia. "All

PARUP — BAILEY

On Saturday, July 17th, 1976, the British Embassy Church, Stockholm, Sweden, was the scene of the wedding between Heather Jane Bailey, only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Norman L. Bailey, Victoria, B.C., and Mats Stefan Parup, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Sten Parup, Goteborg, Sweden. The Reverend D. Strangeways officiated at the ceremony.

The bride given the marriage by her father, chose an elegant gown of pure silk chiffon and chiffon draped picture hat. She carried a classic bouquet of white roses and was attended by her sister-in-law. Mrs. Darlene Bailey of Vancouver, as matron of honor and Gail Stirling and Sarah, Angus of Victoria were bridesmaids. They were aftired in silvery blue silk jersey gowns with wreaths of blue and white cornflowers in their hair. They carried bouquets of cornflowers and white sweetheart roses. Haaken Parup, brother of the groom was best man and the ushers were Nigel and Roger Bailey, brothers of the bride. Mile Laurence Chatry attended the guest book.

t. John's Anglican Church in foria, was the scene of a double ring ceremony on Saturday, July 17th, 1976 when Sharon Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Kinghorn became the bride of Ronald Grant Macauley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Macauley of Port Alberni Reverend David McKay of Port Alberni officiated.
